Credit Unions

A Credit Union is a financial, NOT-FOR-PROFIT cooperative created for and by it's members who are it's depositors, borrowers, and shareholders.

Credit Union Members are it's depositors, shareholders and borrowers.

A Credit Union's profits are distributed right back to their members in the form of better rates, low or no fees and new services.

A Credit Union's Board of Directors are strictly Volunteers and are regulated/insured by the National Credit Union Administration (NCUA).

A Bank is a FOR-PROFIT institution created to serve and gain profits for its depositors and stockholders who share no ownership, and is open to the public.

Bank Customers have no ownership interest in the institution. Banks are owned by investors who may or may not be depositors.

Competition between banks prohibits a sharing of resources and returns profits to stockholders.

Banks pay their Board of Directors and are regulated/insured by the Federal Deposit Insurance Corporation (FDIC).
